This morning's mail brings a letter from an able and thoughtful liberal, following officers were elected: Presiwho says:

I do not mean to make an appeal for the Woman's Party or to ask sympathy on account of its few numbers. I am thinking of the classification of people as those who want to make things better as against the majority who want to hold what they have, or who don't care.

Who was the brilliant Englishman who said that if twenty genuine liberals would for once agree among themselves they could overturn any government?

think the liberties of both male and female are too far gone on the way to extinction for it to be worth while quibbling as between the sexes. The general fight seems to me so

Many of my friends feel the same way about the loss of liberty since the war. One of them, a leader in liberal work for twenty years, tells me with amusement, but also with a touch of sadness, that even the Vice President's series of articles against allowing any thought in women's colleges is not wholly without effect.

The head of the largest university in America is widely known as Nicho-las Miraculous Butler. Within a few days he has declared that there is no interesting one. The co-operating or nger any reason to fear the ruling classes. All we have to fear now is the horrible minority.

The Attorney General of the United States has also within a short time delivered himself of a speech in which he said that people who think and suffer for themselves, like Eugene Debs, are as bad as thieves,

Doubtless I ought to be discouraged about liberty in these circumances, as are many of my friends, but I trust the intelligent minority to come into its own, from time to time, and to have its legitimate influence on the direction in which moves the glacier-like mass of the majority.

Value of Mediocrity.

Butler, Daugherty and Coolidge the only persons whose speeches I have been reading. There lies on my desk also an address, now issued in pamphlet form by one of the great minds of this country the outstanding living scholars of the world. In this address Dean Pound says:

Handshake May Convey Germ If It's Too Fervid

CICK men have been known to sing "I don't want to get well," upon meeting up vith pretty blonde nurses.

Healthy men may soon sing a song whose lyrics will contain the declaration: "Germs, kill me quick, I'm in love with a beautiful girl."

The Civic Betterment Association of the District has issued a call to Washington to prefer health to courtesy. If it's a case of love at first sight, forget the courtesy of doffing the hat and shaking the lady's hand. Germs!

Though it may seem a difficult task to compare the feel of a blonde's hand to an array of figures showing the casualties in the wake of courtesy, the association has prepared statistics tracing sickness due to cases of supercourtesy.

CATHOLIC MEN'S COUNCIL

TO GIVE DANCE TUESDAY

Seven thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves of had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a true, appliance or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the trues is only a makeshift—a faise prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.
